

A reproduction of the painting 'The Meeting of the Committee' by J.M.W. Turner. The scene depicts a group of seven men in 19th-century attire, including suits and bow ties, gathered around a large, dark wooden table in a room with bookshelves in the background. The men are engaged in a serious discussion or meeting. One man in the foreground is seated and looking down at a book or document on the table. Another man stands behind him, holding a paper. To the left, another man is seated, looking towards the center. In the background, two more men stand near the bookshelves. The painting is characterized by its visible brushstrokes and a rich, somewhat muted color palette, typical of Turner's style.
